Mark Chatarpal is a student at the University of Toronto. With a love for his home country Guyana and a strong belief in the teachings of political activists Cheddi Jagan and Dr. Walter Rodney, Mark has kept strong connections with his home, family and friends. He believes that where ever in the world he is, and regardless of the path he carves out for himself, he will always be Guyanese with a fighter’s spirit.

I am the village boy who walked bare feet on colours of white, red and brown.

I am the youth who fished within the curvatures of Essequibo and Takatu.

I am that man who is lost in the oblivion of every villagers dream.
