Retirements

Marcia Boosinger, associate dean for public services of Auburn University Libraries (AUL), has retired after 32 years at AUL. Boosinger was instrumental in the continued development of the libraries of Auburn University, including two building expansions of the main Ralph Brown Draughon

Marcia Boosinger

and the repurposing of library spaces to make the Auburn libraries a one-stop study help location for students. During her tenure at AUL, Boosinger was awarded the Auburn University Women of Distinction Leadership Award for Faculty; Significant Contribution Award, Alabama Association of College and Research Libraries; and the Blackwell North America Award for Research Promise in Librarianship. Boosinger began her career at Auburn University in 1986 as the first coordinator of bibliographic instruction, a program that grew to offer more than 650 classes to more than 14,000 students annually during her tenure. In 1998 she assumed the newly created position of head of reference and instruction services, consolidating all library reference services into a single operating unit within the libraries. Boosinger was appointed associate dean for public services in 2007. She has solely authored or contributed to numerous articles and various other publications, professional presentations, and posters. Boosinger has also been active in service to the university community as secretary of the Auburn University Senate, the first librarian to serve on the University Promotion and Tenure Committee, cochair of the University Writing Initiative Task Force, and founding and continuing member of the Auburn University Common Book Committee. She served as the university faculty athletics representative, chair of the Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics, member of the NCAA Academics/Eligibility Cabinet, and member of the Southeastern Conference Executive Committee. Boosinger's professional organization service includes her election to four consecutive three-year terms as the Alabama chapter councilor, service on the ALA Executive Council, and as president of the Alabama Association of College and Research Libraries.

David Lewis, after 18 years at the helm of the IUPUI University Library, will retire in May 2018. While at IUPUI, Lewis advanced the conversation about what a 21st-century library should be. His vision is described in his 2016 publication Reimagining the Academic Library (Rowan & Littlefield). Lewis was named the 2018 ACRL Academic/Research Librarian of the Year. In his retirement, Lewis plans to continue his participation in the wider community of organizations focused sustainable models for scholarly publication, dissemination, and curation.
