JOSEPH A. BOISSÉ has been appointed director of libraries at Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Boissé has been director of the Library/Learning Center, University of Wisconsin-Parkside in Kenosha since 1973.

He began his career in 1967 as regional librarian and special services coordinator at the Vermont Department of Libraries. In 1968 he moved to Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisconsin, where he served as assistant director of the library until 1971. He returned to the Vermont Department of Libraries in 1971 and held the position of assistant state librarian and director of extension services until 1973 when he was named director at Wisconsin-Parkside.

Boissé earned an A.B. from Stonehill College, an M.A. in French literature from Brown University, and an M.S. in library science from Simmons College.

He has served as chairman of the Executive Board of the Council of Wisconsin Librarians, as director of the New England Library Association, as president of the Midwest Federation of Library Associations, and a member of the Legislation Committee of ACRL.

In 1978 he received the Wisconsin Library Association's Distinguished Service Award. He is the coauthor of Economics Research: A Manual of Library Sources.

PATRICIA J. DELKS, library director for Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Missouri, has been appointed director of the Rollins College Libraries, replacing George L. Larsen, who retired June 1 after ten years with the college.

A 1947 graduate of Indiana University, Delks received her master of library science degree from Case Western Reserve University in 1954.

Prior to her appointment at Lindenwood in 1974, Delks served as head of reference at Smith College in Massachusetts, 1963-74; head of the Serials and Documents Division at Syracuse University, 1956 to 1963; and director of the University of California at Los Angeles Geology Branch Library, 1954-56.

In 1977 Delks published an original slide/sound instructional program entitled "A Guide to Chemical Abstracts" and has compiled a bibliography on the Fascist period in Italy.

ARTHUR T. HAMLIN has retired as director of libraries, Temple University, Philadelphia. Hamlin had been director at Temple since 1968 and had served as university librarian at the University of Cincinnati from 1956 to 1968.

Hamlin's career began at the Harvard College Library, where he was an assistant in the Order Department and later curator of poetry. In 1939 he moved to the New York Public Library and in 1940 to the University of Pennsylvania Library, where he served as reference assistant until 1942, when he entered the Navy. He returned to Pennsylvania in 1945 as assistant librarian in charge of reader services. From 1949 to 1956 he was executive secretary of the Association of College and Reference Libraries of the American Library Association.

Hamlin, who earned an A.B. degree from Harvard University and a B.S. in library science from Columbia University, did graduate work at Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania. He was a Fulbright lecturer at the University of Pavia in Italy in 1962 and a Fulbright research scholar at the University of Birmingham, in England, 1966-67.

Hamlin not only has served as executive secretary of ACRL and as a member of Council of ALA (for two four-year terms) but also has held numerous committee assignments in ALA over nearly thirty years. He was chairman of the ALA committee to aid Florentine libraries after the floods of 1966. The Italian government honored him for his services during commemoration ceremonies held in Florence in November 1967.

He has written on library developments in France, Italy, and England and has completed a history of university libraries in the United States.

W. CARL JACKSON, dean of libraries, Indiana University, Bloomington, has announced that he will retire on June 30, 1980, to become professor of library administration and librarian at Indiana.

Jackson, 55, arrived at Indiana in 1973 as the first dean of University Libraries. He has been responsible for the overall administration of fifty main, branch, and departmental libraries within the eight-campus Indiana system.

After six years as dean of libraries at Indiana and eighteen years as a top-line library administrator, Jackson told Indiana's library staff in April, "I no longer feel that necessary joy of finding solutions to seemingly insoluble problems, but rather view as arduous and painful each new problem that arises."

Given the prospect of more budget cuts and contracting resources for the libraries in the years ahead, Jackson commented that he is delighted to be able to leave his post "while I still have some reputation intact and while I still have friends left in the university."

Jackson expressed pride in the progress made by the Indiana libraries since 1973 in tightening up management operations and making technical services and public services more productive and less costly. "How much farther we can go with this belt-tightening before our operations and services begin to deteriorate is, however, a matter about which to be concerned," he said.

After retiring from his post next year, Jackson plans to teach in Indiana University's Graduate Library School, edit a new journal on library administration and an annual library publication series, and write a book about his sixty-one-day solo crossing of the Atlantic in a thirty-foot ketch last summer.

Jackson earned his B.A. and M.A. in library science from Florida State University. He has worked at the libraries of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and at Iowa State University and the University of Minnesota. He was associate director of libraries at the University of Colorado from 1963 to 1965 and director of libraries at Pennsylvania State University from 1965 to 1968 before going to Indiana.

SUSAN K. MARTIN of the General Library at the University of California at Berkeley (UCB) has been appointed librarian of the Milton S. Eisenhower Library at the Johns Hopkins University.

Martin, who holds degrees from Tufts University and the Simmons College Graduate School of Library Science, has been head of the Library Systems Office of the General Library at Berkeley since 1973. Her special interest is automated library networks.

She succeeds David H. Stam, who resigned in 1978 to become the Andrew W. Mellon director of the Research Libraries of the New York Public Libraries.

In her work at Berkeley, she coordinated the development of automated systems throughout the library and supervised systems analyses in all areas. She participated in library-wide administration and worked with libraries both within and outside the University of California system. During 1977 she was also coordinator of the UCB/Stanford Research Library Cooperative Program.

Prior to joining the staff at Berkeley, she worked at the Harvard University Library, serving as systems librarian during 1968-73, as specialist in data processing during 1965-68, and as an intern from 1963 to 1965.

Martin was 1978-79 president of the Library and Information Technology Association of the American Library Association and in November 1976 was one of a three-member ALA delegation to the Soviet Union.

She has written and edited numerous articles and monographs on library automation and from 1973 to 1977 was editor of the Journal of Library Automation. She is a member of the contributing board of editors of Advanced Technology/Libraries.
