JAMES A. DAMICO has been appointed director of Cook Memorial Library, University of Southern Mississippi, Hattiesburg. He was associate university librarian at Rice University from 1977 to 1981.

Earlier positions Damico has held include science librarian (1972-1975) and head of reference/information services (1975-1977) at Brown University, and library systems specialist at the University of Dayton.

Damico has been active in the Special Libraries Association and served as chair of the Government Information Services Committee of that association. As a consultant he has worked for the Universidade Estadual de Campinas in Brazil.

He received a bachelors in business administration from C.W. Post College of Long Island University and an MLS from Rutgers University.

ANGELA GIRAL, chief librarian of Harvard's Graduate School of Design, has been chosen to head Columbia University's Avery Architectural and Fine Arts Library, effective September 1. Giral has held her present post since 1975. Prior to that she was librarian in Princeton's School of Architecture and Urban Planning.

Giral was born in Spain and received her advanced education in Mexico and the United States. She majored in architecture at the Academia Hispano-Mexicana in Mexico City and in Spanish literature at the Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico. She received her MLS from the University of Michigan in 1958 and spent the following year there as a University Fellow.

She was senior cataloger at Princeton University from 1962 to 1967, with a year's interruption in 1964 to acquire materials in Brazil for the Princeton collection. From 1967 until her move to Harvard, she was librarian of the Urban and Environmental Studies Library of Princeton's

School of Architecture and Urban Planning.

Giral was chair of the Urban Affairs Section of the Special Libraries Association in 1972-1973 and earlier served as president of the Princeton-Trenton Chapter of that association. She has been president of the Council of Planning Librarians, and a director of the International Institute in Spain since 1978.

PHYLLIS L. CUTLER, assistant university librarian and science librarian at Brandeis University, has been appointed college librarian at Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts, effective July 1. Cutler will replace Lawrence E. Wikander, at Williams since 1968, who is retiring.

Cutler did her undergraduate work at Harvard and earned an MLS from the School of Librarianship and Information Science at Simmons College in 1966. Starting as Brandeis science librarian in 1971, she assumed the additional duties of assistant university librarian in 1974. Prior to her arrival at Brandeis, Cutler was supervisor of adult services at the Newton Free Library from 1968-1971, and a librarian at the Morrill Memorial Library, Norwood, Massachusetts, from 1966-1968.

Cutler has been active in regional and national professional organizations, planning conferences and programs, and lecturing on current library issues.

FRANK P. GRISHAM has been named executive director of the Southeastern Library Network (SOLINET), Atlanta, effective July 1. Grisham comes to Atlanta from his position as director of the Vanderbilt University Library, a post he has held since 1968.

Grisham is a national leader in the library profession, having served on the board of directors of the Association of Research Libraries; the OCLC Users Council; the White House Conference on Library and Information Services; and as president of the Tennessee Library Association (1975-1976). He has been a member of the SOLINET board of directors since 1977 and served as its chairman in 1978-1979.

Grisham served as divisional librarian (1956-1964), assistant director of joint university libraries (1965-1967), and associate director (1967-1968) of Vanderbilt University Libraries.

He holds a masters of divinity from Vanderbilt and an MLS from George Peabody College (1958).

MERRILY E. TAYLOR, director of the Library Services Group at Columbia University, has been named university librarian at Brown University, Providence, effective July 1. Taylor has directed the group since 1978, with responsibility for coordinating the public service activities of three major divisions of the university libraries. She worked in the University of South Florida library for nine years, rising from reference librarian to head of the Collection Development Department, and spent a year as special assistant to the Office of the University Librarian at Yale.

Merrily Taylor

Taylor holds a masters in English literature from the University of South Florida (1973) and an MLS from Florida State University (1968). In 1976-1977 she was a Council on Library Resources management intern at Yale.

She is the author of two monographs published in 1978: The Yale University Library 1701-1978:

Its History, Collections and Present Organization, and Remembering Pyotr Demianovich Ouspensky, published by the Yale University Library.

PERSONNEL STUDY GROUP

ACRL has had a long-standing and major concern for academic status and other personnel issues. Together with ACRL, the American Library Association has designated personnel resources as one of its top five priorities—a goal with emphasis on the promotion of professional development, rights, interests, and obligations of library personnel. However, within ACRL there may have been a lack of comprehensiveness and cohesion in the program approach to this broad concern. Certain aspects have been covered by one or another committee or discussion group, yet the total impact of ACRL's efforts in this area has been unclear. There may well be inadequate attention paid to the variety of personnel and career issues that should be pursued.

To the end of re-evaluating, clarifying, and re-focusing a comprehensive set of efforts, the ACRL Executive Committee has created an Ad Hoc Academic and Research Library Personnel Study Group. This has been reported to the Board for their comment and information, and subsequently the committee membership has been formed as listed below. There will be consultation with related groups both inside and outside ALA to help with this effort. A sound redefined program in this important area will assist ence literature and in the history of American woodworking tools. His book, American Woodworking Tools (New York Graphic Society, 1978) is a definitive work on the subject. He has also been active in the Early American Industries Association, serving as its president from 1973 to 1976.

Keabian earned his bachelors degree from Yale in 1938, and his MLS from Columbia in 1948. He began his professional career at the Yale University Library, held the position of chief cataloger and other responsible positions in the Preparation Division of the New York Public Library from 1948 to 1963, and served as associate director of libraries at the University of Florida from 1963 to 1966.

During 1961–1962 he held a Ford Foundation appointment as program specialist in library development at the University of Baghdad. He was a long time member of the Rite of the Red Dog, an extremely unofficial ALA discussion group.—Suzanne Massonneau.

DEATH

AILEEN PROPES, formerly head cataloger at California State University, Long Beach, died on April 24 after an extended illness. ■■

ACRL and all those who work in academic and research libraries.

The charge to this study group is as follows:

To further the special interests of ACRL through efforts to assess the adequacy of current programs and committee activities in the light of present goals, objectives and priorities; to suggest to the ACRL Board of Directors by January, 1984, any initiatives needed so as to assure a suitably comprehensive program; to coordinate within ALA as seems useful, and thus to advance efforts in recruiting, professional education, counseling, career development, status and perquisites, and similar aspects of staffing, careers, and personnel administration in academic and research librarianship.

This study group is chaired by Page Ackerman and includes D. Kaye Gapen, dean of libraries, University of Alabama (from the ACRL Academic Status Committee); George M. Bailey, Claremont College Libraries (from the Chapters Council); Keith Cottam, director for public services, Vanderbilt University Library (from the Continuing Education Committee); Carolyn Henderson, personnel officer, Stanford University Libraries (from the Personnel Administrators Discussion Group); Thomas L. Wilding, director for administrative and personnel services of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Libraries (from the Staff Development Discussion Group); Deanna B. Marcum, program associate of the Council on Library Resources (at-large); Suanne W. Muehlner, director of the Colby College Library (at-large); and Julie Carroll Virgo, ACRL executive director, serving without vote.

Those with suggestions for this study group should write Page Ackerman at 310 20th Street, Santa Monica, CA 90402; (213) 393-2376. ■■

New Technology

● BAKER & TAYLOR will introduce their LIBRIS II automated acquisitions system at the ALA Philadelphia Conference. The system has been field-tested at 30 libraries and is now fully operational. LIBRIS II features: pre-order online searching; electronic ordering; complete record editing and updating; open order control and duplicate order checking; fund accounting; automatic receiving; and management reports. It also provides access and interface with all Baker & Taylor distribution centers. Central to the system is a database of approximately 600,000 title records, including current LC cataloging data. For more information, contact Baker & Taylor, 1515 Broadway, New York, NY 10036.

● BATTELLE, Columbus, Ohio, now offers a screen-oriented data entry and editing feature on its BASIS Data Management System. The new capability (called SCREEN) can be used to record information for library catalogs using formatted terminal screens. SCREEN requires no programming effort because each screen is defined in the BASIS data definition language. It can be used with DEC VT100 and VT52 and HP2600 terminals, and soon will be available for IBM 3101 and 3270 terminals.

● Machine-Mediated Learning is a new quarterly journal that will be published by Crane, Russak & Company, beginning in September. Its major focus will be on the scientific, technological, and management aspects of the application of machines to instruction and training. Subscriptions will be $86 annually for institutions and $45 for individuals, plus postage and handling.

● MAXWELL LIBRARY SYSTEMS, Cambridge, Massachusetts, has developed software that enables the Radio Shack TRS80 computer to be used as a terminal for access to OCLC. The software uses translation tables to permit the TRS80 keyboard to perform all the special commands required for access to OCLC. Information found in the database can be transferred to the microcomputer's memory and saved on floppy or hard disks for later use. Libraries using this sys-

LIBRARY AUTOMATION HANDBOOK

By DENNIS REYNOLDS. Library automation is an issue of great importance in the 80s—and this invaluable book provides the necessary background and framework for understanding the many complexities involved. It presents an integrated approach to automation within the library setting, discussing such key areas as the character of library automation; technical services support systems; public services support systems; COM catalogs in the library; automated circulation systems; automation and resource sharing; implementing automated reference services; decision-making and library automation. ISBN 0-8352-1489-3. approx. 304 pp. To be published October, 1982. $35.00 tent.

LEARNING THE LIBRARY: Concepts and Methods for Effective Bibliographic Instruction

By ANNE K. BEAUBIEN, SHARON A. HOGAN, and MARY W. GEORGE. There is today a strong and growing interest in bibliographic instruction (BI) to educate library patrons in how to use the library and its resources most effectively. This book is a complete description of an academic bibliographic instruction program, offering a comprehensive examination of the concepts, techniques, and applications of BI. It is also a step-by-step and "how-to" guide to designing a successful instruction program. Also useful for public and secondary school libraries. ISBN 0-8352-1505-9. approx. 256 pp. July 1982. $35.00

THEORIES OF BIBLIOGRAPHIC EDUCATION Designs for Teaching

By CERISE OBERMAN and KATINA STRAUCH. A companion volume to LEARNING THE LIBRARY, this volume applies educational theory to bibliographic instruction and explores the educational principles that underlie the teaching method. As such, it is the first work to bridge the gap between theory and the art of teaching, which is the key to understanding the structure of information gathering. The focus is on the major philosophies and thought on bibliographic instruction, rather than on the particulars of specific programs. ISBN 0-8352-1506-7. approx. 240 pp. July 1982. $35.00
