AWARDS ANNOUNCED

BEVERLY P. LYNCH, university librarian at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, has been awarded the ACRL Academic/Research Librarian of the Year Award for 1981. The Association of College and Research Libraries and the Baker & Taylor Company presented the award to Lynch on June 28 at the ACRL reception during the American Library Association's Annual Conference in San Francisco.

The award cites Lynch for her work in serving as ACRL's Executive Secretary in 1972-1977 (the first woman to hold that post), as well as her influential work over the past decade on the ACRL Board of Directors, the College & Research Libraries Editorial Board, and numerous ACRL committees.

"An experienced teacher and a strong scholar," reads the citation, "she has produced an extensive body of research, noteworthy for its rigor and sound methodology, and she has been frequently drafted as lecturer, panelist, and consultant."

Lynch was also cited for her extensive previous experience as an academic librarian, which includes positions held at Marquette University and Yale University libraries. Since 1977 Lynch has been university librarian at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, where she administers a library containing nearly three-quarter of a million volumes.

The ACRL Academic/Research Librarian of the Year Award was established by ACRL and the Baker & Taylor Company to recognize individual members of the library profession who have made outstanding national or international contributions to academic and research librarianship and library development. The award consists of $2,000 and a citation.

Last year's award was presented to Evan I. Farber, librarian at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana.

ROLAND E. SCHOENIKE, professor of forestry at Clemson University, Clemson, South Carolina, has been selected to receive the 1981 Eunice Rockwell Oberly Award for Bibliography in the Agricultural Sciences.

Schoenike was chosen for his 5,891-citation monograph, Yellow Poplar (Liriodendron tulipifera L.): An Annotated Bibliography to and including 1974, published by Clemson's Department of Forestry in the College of Forest and Recreation Resources.

Schoenike has been at Clemson University since 1963 and has published extensively in the field of forestry, including articles in Tree Planters Notes and Silvae Genetica.

The Oberly Memorial Award, instituted in 1925, is presented in odd-numbered years to an American citizen who compiles the best bibliography in agriculture or related sciences in the preceding two-year period. The award is administered by the Science and Technology Section of the Association of College and Research Libraries.

Copies of Schoenike's bibliography are obtainable only from the Department of Forestry, College of Forest and Recreation Resources, Clemson University, Clemson, SC 29631, at a cost of $6.00. ■■

ONLINE CATALOGS ANALYZED

The Council on Library Resources has approved funding for several projects to evaluate online public access catalogs. Five different groups have agreed to work together in a two-phase project to assure coordination of their efforts: J. Matthews & Associates, OCLC, Inc., the Research Libraries Group, the University of California's Division of Library Automation, and the Library of Congress.

The major objectives of the evaluation are to produce comparative data on existing systems and to provide information for use in guiding the development of future online catalogs. Two types of data will be collected: 1) information about the requirements of those who use online catalogs and about the influence of such catalogs on user behavior; 2) information about the performance of existing online public access catalogs relative to user expectations and requirements.

Grants totalling nearly $176,000 have been approved for the Research Libraries Group and three member institutions. RLG will assess three operational online catalogs: one at Stanford, using the Research Libraries Information Network (RLIN); one at Northwestern, using a system developed at that institution; and one at Dartmouth, using a system developed in conjunction with Bibliographic Retrieval Services.

The principal pre-test of the RLG's evaluation survey has been underway at Northwestern because of the advanced development of LUIS, the library's online catalog. The questionnaire asks users to identify problems with features in the catalog. Ultimately the survey will generate data that will improve the system and increase its usefulness, as well as provide demographic information about users and identify the barriers that discourage people from using the system.

J. Matthews & Associates, a California consulting firm, has been awarded a $99,500 contract to analyze six online public access catalogs in smaller public and academic libraries, including the Claremont Colleges, Mankato State University, Stephen F. Austin State University, and Mission Community College.

Up to $22,000 has been approved for an assessment of the University of California, Division of Library Automation's prototype on-line public access union catalog, and the Library of Congress will receive up to $16,351 to support data collection on its SCORPIO and MUMS systems.

The funding for these projects is provided as part of CLR's Bibliographic Service Development Program which attempts to draw upon technology to help solve problems of bibliographic control. ■
