Deaths

CHARLES MARSHALL ADAMS, 83, of High Point, North Carolina, died on December 8, 1990, of cardiac arrest. Adams was Librarian Emeritus, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and a past president (1950-51) of ACRL. Born at Lamoure, North Dakota, August 24, 1907, Adams graduated from Amherst College in 1929 and then took graduate degrees in English and Library Science at Columbia University, New York. From 1934-38 he worked at the New York Public Library and from 1938-45 he was assistant to the director and librarian in charge of special collections, Columbia University Library. In 1945 he became library director at the Woman's College (which became the University of North Carolina at Greensboro), a position he resigned in 1969 to become director of the Sinclair Library, University of Hawaii. He retired in 1973. In 1978 he was awarded an honorary doctorate in Humane Letters by UNCG.

In addition to his many professional articles and reviews, particularly in regard to design of college libraries, Adams was a distinguished bookman. His personal collections of the works of Randall Jarrell and writers of the Southern Appalachians were given in recent years to the Amherst College Library, and he authored the first published bibliography of Jarrell's poetry and criticism in 1958. Jarrell later paid tribute to Adams' administration of the UNCG library: "I've never seen a library whose whole spirit is more humane and kindly, good-humored and good-hearted, more free of anxiety and pettiness." One example of this spirit was Adams' order that black students were to be

Retirements

JACOB D. KOREVAAR, associate librarian at the Law School Library at Harvard University, retired at the end of February. He had been head of international legal studies since 1983.

LUCIA J. RATHER retired in January after 33 years at the Library of Congress, the last 14 as head of cataloging.

admitted for the first time through the front entrance of the UNCC Library, a controversial step at that time. Memorial contributions may be made to the Friends of the Library at UNCG, a group founded by Adams in 1958.

JULIE BLATTNER, chief documents librarian in the Harvard College Library since 1983, died on January 24, 1991. From 1978-83 Blattner was librarian in the Center for International Affairs in the Center for Middle Eastern Studies, and in the Harvard Institute for International Development. "Julie never forgot what we are here for: people, the people we work with and the patrons we work for," said Carrie Kent, assistant to the associate librarian of Harvard College for Public Services.

ROBERT BINGHAM DOWNS, 87, library dean emeritus and library school dean emeritus of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, died February 24, 1991, of pneumonia.

"As a scholar, information scientist, and defender of intellectual freedom, Robert Downs had few equals. He was a man of vast intellect, integrity and conviction. For myself and for many others he was a distinguished role model and friend who will be greatly missed," said current ALA President, Richard Dougherty.

It was during Downs's long tenure as library dean, from 1943-1971 that the University of Illinois Library at Urbana-Champaign grew to its present position as the third largest American university library and the largest state university library in the U.S. During the height of the McCarthy era, Downs led an effort against what he called "the current wave of anti-intellectualism, manifesting itself in attacks on books, on freedom of speech, freedom of inquiry, freedom to teach and all those rights we have long held to be guaranteed by the 1st Amendment." His strong public statements against censorship, made while president of ALA from 1952-53, led to President Dwight D. Eisenhower's 1953 "Don't Join the Bookburners" speech.

Downs authored more than 40 books and 400 articles. To the general public, Downs is probably best known for his 1956 best-seller, Books that Changed the World, that was translated into 17 languages, expanded and revised twice, and sold several million copies.

Downs was the recipient of numerous awards including the Japanese "Order of the Sacred Treasure" for his work on establishing the Japanese Library School and National Diet Library. ALA honored him with the Melvil Dewey Medal for creative professional achievement and the Clarence Day Award in 1963, saying, "No librarian has reached such a wide audience and no librarian has made a richer contribution to an understanding of books for their enjoyment and for their significance in our time."

A high school drop out, Downs went on to earn a bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and a second bachelor's and a master's degree from Columbia University. He worked at the New York Public Library, Colby College, the University of North Carolina, and served as the director of libraries at New York University from 1938-43.

PERNA S. LOH, 87, head librarian at Wartburg College from 1943-1968, died February 1 in Waverly, Iowa. Lohn was instrumental in developing the Engelbrecht Library at Wartburg. ■ ■
