AAHE meets in Chicago

The American Association for Higher Education (AAHE) met March 14, 1984, in Chicago. While visiting the exhibits, I spoke with John Minter of the Chronicle Data Service in Boulder, Colorado. Minter hopes to have the data from the NCES survey of college and university libraries for 1981–82 available soon on floppy disks to be used on personal computers. Depending on the software used, the cost will be from $95 to $125 to nonprofit institutions for data on up to 300 colleges and universities. Data blocks are available by state, by accrediting region, or by type of institution (2-year, university, public, private, etc.). Custom blocks can be developed for an extra $50. The Chronicle Data Service is located at 1790 30th St., Suite 150, Boulder, CO 80301. Remember that ACRL is also making the data available in hard copy: Library Statistics of Colleges and Universities, 1981–82. Data on all 3,000 institutions in the survey is available prepaid for $12 for ACRL members and $16 for non-members.

Also exhibiting at AAHE was the Computer Literacy Project of EDUCOM. EDUCOM is a consortium of colleges and universities founded in 1964 to facilitate the introduction, use, and management of information technology. The Computer Literacy Project was created in 1983 to assist academic institutions in promoting computer literacy for non-specialists on their campuses. The Project maintains a database on computer literacy projects at different institutions, publishes a newsletter, runs seminars, and is developing guidelines for computer literacy programs. Over 600 academic institutions are participating in this project. For further information, write to Steven W. Gilbert, Director, Computer Literacy Project, EDUCOM, Box 364, Princeton, NJ 08540.

At every conference, AAHE reserves time for “Position Roundtables” where individuals can get together for an informal meeting with colleagues in the same position at other institutions. ACRL member Joanne Euster, library director at San Francisco State University, arranged a meeting of deans and directors of libraries. The librarians attending the meeting agreed that it is important for library administrators to participate in higher education associations like AAHE in order to give increased visibility to academic libraries.—Sandy Whiteley, ACRL program officer. ■■
