JAMES B. ALSIP has been appointed university librarian at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. Alsip was previously associate director for technical services and associate professor of bibliography at the University of Oklahoma libraries.

During his four years at the University of Oklahoma, Alsip has also served as interim director of university libraries and acting associate director for public services. Before going to Oklahoma, he spent six years at Western Illinois University, where he was assistant library director, acquisitions librarian, and circulation and reserve librarian. He began his professional career in 1968 as first assistant social science librarian at the University of Georgia libraries.

He received his B.A. degree in political science and history from Texas Christian University and obtained his M.L.S. from Emory University. He has served as president of the Oklahoma Library Association (OLA) and as director-at-large and chairperson of the automation round table of OLA.

SCOTT BRUNTJEN, head of public services at Shippensburg State College, has been named executive director of the Pittsburgh Regional Library Center, Chatham College.

Bruntjen holds a bachelor of arts in history and a master of arts in library science from the University of Iowa; a master of arts in political science; and a doctorate in Library Administration from Simmons College.

His published works include three volumes of the Checklist of American Imprints (1831-33) and a biography titled Douglas C. McMurtrie: Bibliographer and Historian of Printing.

He has held appointments at the Iowa City, Iowa, Public Library; the State Library of Massachusetts; the School of Library Service at Dalhousie University; the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems; and the School of Library Science at the University of Iowa.

Bruntjen is the current vice-president of the Pennsylvania Library Association and a member of the Library Personnel Resources Committee of the Library Administration and Management Association of the American Library Association.

At the Pittsburgh Regional Library Center he will head a multitype, multistate network providing general resource sharing and OCLC services for fifty member libraries in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland.

W. ROYCE BUTLER, professor of bibliography and director of libraries at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, since 1971, has taken an administrative leave until June 1980, at which time he will retire.

Before his appointment at Manitoba, Butler had served as acquisitions head at the Honnold Library for the Associated Colleges, Claremont, California, and at Boston University; as head of technical services at the University of Denver; as associate director of libraries at York University; and as dean of the library at Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan.

He received a master's degree in librarianship from the University of California, Berkeley, and in English from the University of Toronto.

During Butler's tenure at the University of Manitoba, the new Science Library was opened; additional space was added to the St. Paul's College Library and the Medical Library; the Engineering, Administrative Studies, and Agriculture libraries were staffed with professional librarians; the libraries acquired their millionth volume; and a start was made on an addition to the central library which will increase its size by one-third.

During the forthcoming year, Butler plans to examine acquisitions allocations and book selection practices at major academic research libraries in Canada.

JOHN M. DAWSON, director of libraries at the University of Delaware, retired in July after more than twenty-one years of service.

When Dawson arrived at Delaware as director of libraries, the library had a collection of about 235,000 volumes, an annual circulation of about 81,000 volumes, and a library staff of twenty-nine. Today, the university's library system holds more than 1.5 million volumes, including microfilm, circulates more than 372,000 volumes annually, and has a staff of seventy-nine.

*John M.
Dawson*

Before joining the university staff, Dawson served as assistant director of the University of Chicago Library for ten years, and he was a lecturer in the University of Chicago Graduate Library School from 1953 to 1958. He also served as assistant librarian at Tulane University from 1945 to 1947 and as business manager of the University of Alabama Library from 1941 to 1942.

Born in Scotland, he earned a B.A. in English from Tulane University, a bachelor's degree in library science from Louisiana State University, and a Ph.D. from the Graduate Library School of the University of Chicago.

Dawson has served on the ALA Executive Board, Council, and Publications Board. He has been chair of the University Libraries Section of ACRL and chair or member of numerous other ACRL committees.

MARY ANN GRIFFIN is the new director of the McDonald Memorial Library, Xavier University, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Currently completing work on a Ph.D. in library administration at Simmons College in Boston, Griffin has worked as a library department head at Tufts University in Medford, Massachusetts, and as a staff member at the Pennsylvania State University Library, State College. She earned her bachelor's degree in secondary mathematics education, her master's degree in German literature at Penn State, and a second master's in library science at Simmons College.

In addition to her library duties, Griffin has taught German courses at Penn State and coauthored a paper on the use of library materials, and she is the editor of the alumni newsletter

Evan Farber talks about the reference value of book reviews and their lack of retrospective indexing — all of which led to the

COMBINED RETROSPECTIVE INDEX TO SCHOLARLY JOURNALS, 18

Evan Ira Farber

Background: While writing his "Introduction" and "User's Guide" to Carrollton's Combined Retrospective Index Sets (CRIS) — which index all articles in the complete backfiles of 531 journals in History, Political Science, and Sociology — Farber quickly came up with the suggestion that we also do a combined and cumulative index to all the book reviews which appeared in these same journals during their complete runs. The following text attempts to record the essence of a number of discussions which were held on the subject.

Farber: Book reviews in the scholarly journals of the social sciences provide a crucible in which the output of scholarly research is examined, tested, and responded to. Through these reviews, one can trace the acceptance or rejection of new ideas, observe the establishment or undoing of individual reputations, and follow intellectual debates, not only between author and reviewer, but also among reviewers themselves.

Carrollton: I'm convinced that these book reviews are valuable reference tools, but aren't most of them already covered in existing book review indexes?

Farber: Definitely not. Our Combined Retrospective Index to Reviews in Scholarly Periodicals, 1886-1974, will complement all other book review indexes rather than compete with them.

Carrollton: Just how does our coverage compare to that of Book Review Digest?

Farber: In terms of numbers of scholarly journals covered, of course, our Index covers 472 journals in History, Political Science, and Sociology (59 of the 531 CRIS Journals contained no book reviews) while BRD covers 75 journals, of which fifteen can be considered scholarly journals in these fields. In discussing Book Review Digest, of course, we must remember that its emphasis is on literature and popular and semi-popular works. It includes adult and juvenile fiction as well as a universal range of non-fiction subject matter, and, therefore, quite correctly concentrates on the broad-based reviewing services to an extent that the majority of its entries come from such publications. Meanwhile, in addition to its limited number of scholarly journals covered, Book Review Digest has several self-imposed restrictions which limit even its coverage of the 75 publications which it does index. These are described in the "Prefatory Note" to the May, 1976, issue of Book Review Digest as follows:

"To qualify for inclusion a book must have been published or distributed in the United States. A work of non-fiction must have received two or more reviews and one of fiction four or more reviews in the journals selected. Exception is made for books reviewed in the Reference and

"Book Review Digest, for instance, is retrospective to 1905 but quite weak in its coverage of scholarly journals.

"Meanwhile, the new indexes which recently began to cover large numbers of scholarly journals are not retrospective.

"Therefore, this substantial gap in coverage can only be filled by an index which is retrospective and more thorough in its coverage of scholarly journals."

Subscription Books Reviews section of the Booklist where one review is deemed sufficient. Reviews must have appeared within eighteen months following a book's publication; at least one review must be from a journal published in the United States."

Farber: Many important but specialized works are omitted because of these restrictions, especially those published in Great Britain and Canada. Also, many reviews do not appear in those few scholarly journals which BRD does cover until after the 18-months-after-original-publication deadline, and thereby escape indexing.

Carrollton: I understand there are now two cumulative indexes which include all the entries in Book Review Digest from 1905 through 1970. Will these cut into our market?

Farber: They shouldn't. Although valuable as single-alphabet indexes to the general reviewing media, they merely accumulate the shortcomings of the annual volumes when it comes to coverage of scholarly journals. Also, of course, our coverage goes back to include reviews in journals published before 1905.

Carrollton: In any event, I guess we can't claim to be the first to recognize BRD's "scholarly journal gap" considering all of the recent efforts to index large numbers of these publications.

Farber: Precisely. These include Wilson's own Current Book Review Citations, which first appeared in 1976, and covers some 1300 titles; ABC/Clio's America: History and Life "Part B, Index to Book Reviews", which began in 1974 and covers 115 exclusively scholarly journals; and Gale Research's Book Review Index, which has covered a more general collection of 235 titles since 1965.

Carrollton: But as you said, these new indexes are not retrospective.

Farber: Correct! When it comes to large scale retrospective coverage of reviews in scholarly journals, our Combined Index leaves off where the others begin.

EVAN IRA FARBER is Librarian of Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana and author of five editions of the standard serial selection guide, Classified List of Periodicals for the College Library. He also writes the column "Periodicals for the College Library" which appears monthly in Choice magazine. From 1969 through 1971 he served as a member of the Council of the American Library Association and was Chairman of ALA's College Library Section from 1968-1969. He is now also serving as a member of the Board of Consultants to the National Endowment for the Humanities.

From the complete backfile runs of 472 scholarly journals in History, Political Science, and Sociology, comes this single source of author/title access to more than 1.2 million book reviews—the majority of which have never before been included in any book review index.

SAMPLE ENTRIES AND COVERAGE COMPARISONS

The Exhibits shown below not only illustrate the format and content of the entries in our Combined Retrospective Index to Book Reviews in Scholarly Journals, 1886-1974 (RSJ), but also compare its coverage to that of Book Review Digest (BRD) for the same works. RSJ's main entries are arranged first alphabetically by authors' names. Multiple titles by the same author are then listed alphabetically, and under each title, reviews themselves are listed alphabetically by journal title. Separate index volumes list titles alphabetically with cross references to authors' names.

For purposes of comparison, the Exhibits also show entries from the cumulative Book Review Digest, Author/Title Index, 1905-1974 and separate lists of all reviews cited in the BRD annual volumes.

Address

ROBERT W. ORAM, associate university librarian at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, has been named director of central libraries at Southern Methodist University (SMU), Dallas, Texas. At SMU Oram will be responsible for the management and development of a 1.2 million-volume library that includes Fondren Library, Science / Engineering Library, and the Special Collections in Fikes Hall.

Oram joined the staff of the University of Illinois in 1956 as circulation librarian. Later he assumed the position of associate director of public services. With the retirement of Dean Robert B. Downs he became associate university librarian, and he served as acting university librarian from the time of the death of Lucien White in 1975 until October 1976, when Hugh Atkinson became librarian. From 1950 to 1956 he was acquisition librarian, circulation librarian, and assistant to Dr. Ralph Parker at the University of Missouri Library, Columbia.

Active in both the American Library Association and the Illinois Library Association, he has just completed a committee assignment as a member of the ALA Publications Committee. He has been chair of the Booklist Advisory Committee and was chair of Adult Selection Committee for Bicentennial Reading, Viewing, Listening, sponsored by ALA and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Oram received his B.A. from the University of Toledo (Ohio) and his M.S.L.S. at Illinois. He has done graduate work at the University of Missouri.

FRANK RODGERS, library director at Portland State University for ten years, has been appointed University of Miami director of libraries.

As director, Rodgers will be responsible for the Otto G. Richter Library, the engineering and environmental science libraries, and the Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Science library on Virginia Key. He will also serve as advisor to the libraries of the schools of music, medicine, and law. The University of Miami libraries contain about 1.4 million volumes.

Rodgers brings more than twenty-five years of library experience to the University of Miami. Before his appointment as library director at Portland State, he had served as assistant director for public services at the Pennsylvania State University Library and had held various reference librarian positions in this country and Great Britain.

Born and educated in England, Rodgers earned his B.A. at King's College, University of Durham, his postgraduate diploma in librarianship from the School of Librarianship and Archives, University of London, and a fellowship with the Library Association of Great Britain.

MARILYN SHARROW, formerly associate director of libraries at the University of Washington, Seattle became director of libraries, University of Manitoba, Winnipeg on September 1.

Sharrow holds a bachelor of science in design and a master of arts in library science from the University of Michigan and is a candidate for a master's degree in public administration from the University of Washington.

She has held appointments in several libraries, including the Detroit Public Library, Syracuse University Libraries, the Roseville Public Library, Roseville, Michigan, and since 1975 at the University of Washington. In her present appointment, Sharrow is responsible for units within the University of Washington that

Bibliographic Instruction

The Robert Scott Small Library of the College of Charleston will act as host for the third Southeastern Conference on Approaches to Bibliographic Instruction on March 6-7, 1980.

The program directors invite proposals for papers on the philosophy and the practice of library instruction for a panel entitled "Library Instruction: Is There a Role for the Technical Services Librarian?" Proposals should be accompanied by a 300-word abstract and a vita.

Proposals should be mailed by December 1, 1979, and sent to: Cerise Oberman-Soroka, Robert Scott Small Library, College of Charleston, Charleston, SC 29401; (803) 792-5530. Decisions will be made by January 15, 1980.

include about 3 million volumes, about 160 employees, and a budget of $2.8 million.

Sharrow is active in library organizations and agencies at both the local and the national levels and is a regular contributor to Library Journal.

J. DANIEL VANN has been appointed head of Lockwood Memorial Library, State University of New York at Buffalo. He will be responsible for administering the programs, services, and operations of Lockwood Library and its branches, the Architecture and Environmental Design Library, the Library Studies Library, and the Main Street Library. The combined collections under his supervision will total more than 1,000,000 volumes; twenty-five professional and twenty-nine support staff will report to his office.

Joe Richard—MPC

J. Daniel Vann

Vann received his Ph.D. in Medieval History from Yale University in 1965 and his M.S.L.S. from Emory University in 1971. He is currently a tenured Professor of Library at the College of Staten Island, and was chief librarian at Staten Island Community College from 1971 to 1976. During 1977-78, Vann was one of five Council on Library Resources Academic-Library Management Interns. He spent the year working with David C. Weber, director of the Stanford University Libraries. He has held librarian positions at Keuka College, the Baptist College at Charleston, and the Newberry Library in Chicago. He has taught history at California Baptist College and Campbell College.

Active in the library profession, he is currently a member of the ALA Membership Promotion Task Force and the board of editors of Choice. He is also the chair of the ACRL Membership Committee.
