Profile

NANCY MAGNUSON, assistant librarian for reader services at Haverford College since 1984, has been named director of the library at Goucher College, Baltimore, Maryland.

Magnuson joined the staff at Haverford in 1981 as administrative services librarian. She has also worked as a research assistant at the Free Library of Philadelphia (1980) and as home services librarian in the King County Library System in Seattle, Washington (1978-1980). Magnuson holds a bachelor's degree in history (1977) and an MLS (1978) from the University of Washington.

A former editor of the ACRL College Libraries Section Newsletter, Magnuson presently serves on the ALA Committee on the Status of Women in Librarianship and on the steering committee of the CLS National Advisory Council. At Haverford, she was chair of the Three-College Library Automation Committee, encompassing Bryn Mawr and Swarthmore colleges.

Magnuson has contributed to the ALA bibliography Pay Equity and the publication The Free Library and the Revitalization of Philadelphia.

People in the news

DWIGHT F. BURLINGAME, vice president of university relations at Bowling Green State University, Ohio, was among four distinguished alumni honored at Moorhead State University's centennial year homecoming October 9 in Minnesota. Burlingame, a 1956 business and political science graduate, went on to earn an MLS from the University of Illinois and a Ph.D. at Florida State University. He worked at the University of Iowa, served in the U.S. Army, and was on the library faculty at St. Cloud State University before being named dean of library and learning resources at the

Nancy Magnuson

University of Evansville. He later became dean at Bowling Green State before being named vice president in 1984. An active member of ACRL, Burlingame has also served as a consultant and volunteer director of several community organizations.

DONALD D. HENDRICKS, dean of library services at the University of New Orleans, Louisiana, was presented with the Distinguished Faculty Service Award at the fall meeting of the Honors Council. Hendricks was recognized for his support of the various projects of the University Honors Program.

MARK E. RORVIG, assistant professor in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Texas at Austin, won the 1987 Doctoral Forum Award, presented annually by the American Society for Information Science. At an October 7 ceremony in Boston, Rorvig was honored for his dissertation, "An Experiment in Human Preference for Documents in a Simulated Information System." It explores the long-standing problem of inconsistent document judgements, and how they can be fitted to two mathematical models. Rorvig's findings are applicable to a number of measurement problems in retrieval system evaluation and also shed additional light on what many consider the elusive notion of "recall" or comprehensiveness in document data retrieval.

Deaths

DORALYN JOANNE HICKEY, a member of the faculty of the School of Library and Information Science at North Texas State University and former dean of the library school at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, died March 18 in Denton, Texas. Hickey earned a bachelor's degree from Rice University (1951), a master's degree from the Presbyterian School of Christian Education (1953), an MLS from Rutgers University (1957) and a Ph.D. in religion from Duke University (1962). She was on the faculty of the School of Library Science at the University of North Carolina for 12 years before coming to Wisconsin, where she was dean from 1974 to 1977. During that time she was instrumental in helping the School obtain ALA accreditation for its MLS program. Hickey served on many ALA and IFLA committees and was awarded RTSD's Margaret Mann Award in 1973.

ELIZABETH HUFF, founder and head of the East Asiatic Library at the University of California, Berkeley, died September 19 at the age of 75. Huff, a 1932 graduate in English from the University of Illinois, received a master's degree in art history from Mills College in 1935 and subsequently studied Chinese and Japanese at Harvard University. She then travelled to Japan and China, where she was detained and interned following the outbreak of World War II. In 1947, at the point of completing her dissertation at Harvard following her return to the United States, Huff was asked to reorganize and build the East Asian Collection at Berkeley, which then consisted of some 80,000 scattered Japanese and Chinese books. In the intervening years Huff oversaw the consolidation of the collection and the acquisition of numerous important items, some without parallel outside East Asia, as well as the hiring of a staff that eventually totalled 14. She retired in 1968 to resume her scholarly career.

DOROTHY LONG, former director of the Health Sciences Library at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, died June 20, 1987.

MARY STRANGWAYS STEVENS, assistant director of library systems at York University, North York,

Ontario, died September 5 in Toronto at the age of 57. Born in Toronto, Stevens graduated from the University of Toronto with a bachelor's degree in English and philosophy in 1952. After raising a family, she returned to the University, earning bachelor's (1966) and master's (1967) degrees in library science, and later teaching library automation and documentation as a member of the library science faculty. From 1971 to 1973 Stevens was visiting librarian at the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research in Bombay, India. On her return to Canada she joined the staff at York University and was appointed assistant director of library systems in 1981, earning a master's degree in business administration in 1983. ■■

PUBLICATIONS

• Check This Out: Library Program Models (329 pages, July 1987) is a survey of tested library programs and services that have proven to be successful and effective. Released by the U.S. Department of Education and prepared for the National Diffusion Network under contract to RMC Corporation, the book describes programs for school and public libraries, as well as programs serving defined segments of the population. Of particular interest are the academic library programs mentioned: the University of Nebraska's Consumer Health Information Resource Service, the Oakland University Reference Hotline, and the Earlham College Bibliographic Instruction Program. An appendix contains a synopsis of the definitions and criteria that served as an information base from which the evaluation instruments for the programs were built. Copies are available for $15 (prepaid) from Dept. 36-YA, Superintendent of Documents, Washington, DC 20402-9325; stock no. 065-000-00303-1.

• A Citizen's Guide on Using the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act of 1974 to Request Government Records (56 pages, 1987) has been published by the House Committee on Government Operations. The report is intended to be an introduction to the two acts, reflecting all changes to the laws made since 1977 including the 1986 amendments to the FOIA. It discusses the types of exemptions allowable under the FOIA, administrative appeal procedures, and how to file a judicial appeal. The report also points out requirements for agency responses, fee and fee waivers, and general, specific, medical, and litigation records of the Privacy Act of 1974. Copies may be ordered for $1.75 (prepaid) from Dept. 36-XZ, Superintendent of Documents, Washington, DC 20402-9325; stock no. 052-071-00752-1.

• A Directory of Clearinghouse Participants (39 pages, July 1987) has been published by the ACRL New England Chapter to identify the 75 institutions in its Collection Development Policy Clearinghouse. The directory contains information on collection sizes, sponsoring institutions, and the status of collection development policies at participant libraries, along with names and telephone numbers of contact persons. A free copy may be obtained from Reina Hart, CDIG Clearinghouse, Collection Development Department, Dimond Library, University of New Hampshire, Durham, NH 03824.

• The Directory of Master's Programs in Foreign Languages, Foreign Literatures, and Linguistics (175 pages, September 1987) provides information for prospective graduate students and their advisers in these fields. Entries contain data on languages offered, curricular emphases, requirements, program options, and certificates or diplomas. Indexes by state, program, special program, and certificate or diploma are included. Copies are $15, available from the Modern Language Association of America, 10 Astor Place, New York, NY 10003. ISBN 0-87352-169-2.

• English and American Literature: Sources and Strategies for Collection Development, edited by William McPheron (272 pages, September 1987), has been published as no. 45 in the ACRL Publications in Librarianship series. The essays in the volume describe the tasks involved in building collections of English and American literature for academic libraries and discuss the strategies and tools that facilitate their accomplishment. The focus is on practice, with each author covering the bibliographical sources relevant to their particular topic. Sample chapters include acquisitions, serial bibliographies and review media, retrospective collection development, serials, contemporary literature, textual studies, nonprint media, literary reference collections, and special collections. Copies may be purchased for $29.95 from the ALA Order/Billing Department, 50 E. Huron Street, Chi-
