Steckenreiter began her career at the University in 1963, becoming assistant to the archivist in 1977 and later associate archivist.

Deaths

HUGH CRAIG ATKINSON, director of the University of Illinois Libraries, Urbana-Champaign, died October 24 at age 52. Atkinson, who had been director for 10 years, presided over the computerization of the library's card catalog, the construction of the $6.7 million sixth stack addition, and, most recently, the acquisition of the library's seven-millionth volume.

Hugh C. Atkinson

Before moving to Illinois in 1976, Atkinson was director of libraries at Ohio State University (1971-76), having served since 1967 as assistant director for public services. Born in Chicago, Atkinson attended St. Benedict's College, where he studied accounting and worked for Lawrence Scudder and Co. as a junior accountant (1951-56). He studied English at the University of Chicago and in 1959 received his MLS from Chicago's Graduate Library School, at the same time working as an assistant in rare books at the university library.

Atkinson served as reader services librarian at Pennsylvania Military College (1958-61); head of reference (1961-64), acting assistant director of health sciences libraries (1966-67), and assistant director of libraries for technical services (1964-67) at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He was a member of the board of directors of the Association of Research Libraries and OCLC, a member of the editorial board for the Journal of Library Administration, and was active in other professional library organizations.

Among his recent publications were "Automation in Austerity" (a chapter in the 1984 book Austerity Management in Academic Libraries), "Centralized Library Collections: A Brief for the Other Side" in the Journal of Academic Librarianship, and several columns in the Library Journal's series on technology, people and change.

HELVI BESSENYEI, Scandinavian collections librarian at the University of California at Berkeley, died October 14 after an illness of several months. Bessenyei joined Berkeley in 1967 after receiving an MLS from the university and worked initially in the Bibliographical and Periodical Divisions of the Acquisition Department. She later became head of the Serials Department's Periodical Division, reference and technical services librarian in the Natural Resources Library, and also held a joint assignment with the Education/Psychology Library and the Collection Development and Reference Services Department. Bessenyei became responsible for the Scandinavian collections in 1982.

HELEN ADDISON EVERETT, former university librarian at Humboldt State University, Eureka, California, died February 14, 1986. Born in Oregon in 1902, Everett was a graduate of the University of Oregon and received her MLS from the University of California, Berkeley. She had taught

Spanish at two Oregon high schools and later held library positions at the University of Oregon, Coos Bay High School, Medford Public Schools, and Southern Oregon College of Education before coming to Humboldt in 1939. After retiring in 1967, Everett devoted herself to the establishment of a new Humboldt County Public Library, now in the planning stage.

DAVID THOMPSON, former assistant chief in the Cataloging Department and later acting chief in the Serials Department at Stanford University, died October 12 after a 10-month illness. ■■

PUBLICATIONS

• Andy Warhol's Art and Films, by Patrick S. Smith (613 pages, October 1986), is an in-depth examination of the elusive and controversial creator of the Pop art of the 1950s and 60s. Smith examines the artist's work, his studio practices, and the mystique that has surrounded him, using Warhol's obsession with stardom and fame as the basis for discussing his films. The work features interviews with numerous Warhol associates and with the artist himself, and contains newly-published photographs and little-known information on Warhol's origins and early years as a commercial illustrator. Available for $49.95 from University Microfilms Research Press, Ann Arbor, MI 48106. ISBN 0-8357-1733-X.

• Bowker's American Men and Women of Science (16th ed., 8 vols., 1986) contains 7,280 new profiles of scientists who have made significant contributions in their special fields. This edition includes a revised discipline index (volume 8) that groups the biographees under disciplines adapted from the National Science Foundation's Taxonomy of Degree and Employment Specialties. The cost is $595. Contact: R.R. Bowker Co., P.O. Box 762, New York, NY 10011. ISBN 0-8352-2221-7.

• Classification Schedules as Subject Enhancement in Online Catalogs, by Carol A. Mandel, is a report on an invitational conference sponsored by the Council on Library Resources, Forest Press, and the OCLC Online Computer Library Center held in Dublin, Ohio, in January 1986. The thirty participants included librarians, library school faculty, representatives of library networks, and other classification and online systems specialists. Discussions among participants centered around three themes: subject searching enhancements for future online catalogs; the use of class numbers in searching online; and the potential use of online classification schedules. A free copy may be obtained from the Council on Library Resources, 1785 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

• End-User Searching: An Experiment at the University of Pittsburgh, by Fern Brody (107 pages, October 1986), describes Pittsburgh's experimental end-user searching facility with ten microcomputers for testing all available search packages and user reactions to such a service. The facility was free to members of the University community for most of the period it was open. This report provides evaluations of the search packages used and presents information collected from surveys of users. The experiment resulted in end-user searching becoming an operating unit in Pittsburgh's central library. Copies of the report may be ordered for $15 (prepaid check made out to the University Library System) from Administrative Services, 271 Hillman Library, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, PA 15260.

• Guide to the American Ethnic Press, by Lubomyr R. Wynar (280 pages, 1986), is the first comprehensive directory to almost 600 newspapers and periodicals published by 17 Slavic and East European groups: Bulgarians, Byelorussians, Carpatho-Ruthenians, Cossacks, Croatians, Czechs, Estonians, Hungarians, Latvians, Lithuanians, Poles, Romanians, Russians, Serbians, Slovaks, Slovenians, Ukrainians, and Yugoslavians. Following an essay on the scope and nature of the ethnic press, the volume includes a description of each title and detailed statistical analyses of the presses of individual ethnic groups. Copies may be ordered for $20 from the Center for the Study of Ethnic Publications, School of Library Science, Kent State University, Kent, OH 44242.

• Newspaper Libraries: A Bibliography 1933-85, compiled by Celia Wall, is a complete list of English-language books, parts of books, professional and trade journal articles, technical memoranda, pamphlets, and unpublished materials on newspaper libraries. Copies may be ordered for $12.50 from the Special Libraries Association, 1700 18th St., N.W., Washington, DC 20009.
