Retirements

Margaret "Meg" Scharf, associate director, Communications, Assessment, and Public Relations, has retired from the University of Central Florida (UCF) Libraries. Scharf joined the UCF Libraries in 1984, helping to develop the Library Information Network and Exchange (LINE) program. She then moved to the Reference Department, later becoming head, while teaching popular library instruction classes and developing collections for business and hospitality. Scharf was promoted to associate director for Public Services in 1999; she assumed her current role in 2012, reporting to Director Barry Baker. During her nearly 35 years at UCF, Scharf has been an active member of many professional organizations, including ALA, the Florida Library Association, and the State University Libraries, serving on myriad committees and subcommittees. She has presented at such diverse venues as EDUCAUSE Conferences and the Lilly Conference on Higher Education in England. She held the position of regional reporter for the ACRL Newsletter, Florida chapter, and served as editor of Internet Reference Services Quarterly and as a peer reviewer for the Journal of Academic Librarianship. She also served as a member of the Central Florida Memory project, an online repository of images and stories about the area's history. Within UCF, Scharf served on or chaired numerous committees, including the Advisory Board for the Faculty Center for Teaching and Learning and the Quality Enhancement Advisory Plan Committee. She also worked closely with Student Accessibility Services to improve library services for students with disabilities. She was instrumental in redesigning the main floor of the Orlando campus library to include more space for group and independent learning, and in planning InSTALLments, the quick-read newsletter posted inside the library bathrooms. ♪
