

Susan Augustine, instruction coordinator at the Columbia College Library in Chicago, recently led the Consortium of Academic and Research Libraries in Illinois (CARLI) effort to create a series of tutorials designed to teach library users how to search for books and journals, request books from other libraries, and manage their library account online. Augustine chairs the End User Instruction Committee of CARLI, which is a consortium of 65 Illinois libraries. Augustine and her committee have been training librarians around the state in the customization of these tutorials and the use of the authoring software. The tutorials may be accessed at www.carli.illinois.edu/I-Share/training/movies/eu-tutorials.html.
