

INTRODUCTION

Dear Readers and Authors,

It is with great pleasure we present the next issue of the scientific quarterly Copernican Journal of Finance & Accounting.

The challenges of the modern world are visible in economics and finance. The mission of the journal remains to serve for the development of the science of finance as a forum of presentations and analyses of scientific papers in the scope of finance and accounting in the international dimension.

Being a scientist requires the curiosity to ask questions, to observe changes in the present world and to research them. Through interactions between researchers across different geographical regions, as a scientific journal, we want to play an important role in academic deliberations and create a place for the exchange of scientific views. We hope that the papers contained in our journal will be of value and also interesting for you.

I would like to give a special thank you to the Authors, Reviewers, Scientific Council and the Editorial Team for their contribution in the development of the journal and for their involvement in the creation of the next edition of the quarterly.

I invite you to read and I encourage you to publish the results of your research in our Copernican Journal of Finance & Accounting.
